In earlier days , until disposable sanitary pads were created, cloth or reusable pads were widely used , women often used a variety of home-made menstrual pads which they crafted from various fabrics, or other absorbent materials.

Then came the first pads, which were made from wood pulp bandages by nurses in France. It was very absorbent, and cheap enough to throw away afterwards.

Commercial manufacturers borrowed this idea and the first disposable pads were available for purchase came as early as 1888 – called the Southball pad.

The first of the disposable pads were generally in the form of a cotton wool or similar fibrous rectangle covered with an absorbent liner. But these came with a belt, which was very uncomfortable to wear and use.

Later an adhesive strip was placed on the bottom of the pad for attachment to the crotch of the panties, and this became a favored method with women.

The belted sanitary napkin quickly disappeared making a huge way for the current napkin we use today.

SHAMPOOS & CONDITIONER

Salon Professional Advanced Formula

-Smooth & Shine Shampoo

For Dry & Rough Hair

With Vitamin H, Pro vitamin B5 & Silk Protein

Dry hair develops when hair doesn't get or retain enough moisture. This reduces its sheen and can make it appear frizzy, lifeless, and dull. Dry hair can affect men and women of any age, but are more likely to develop it as you get older.

Hair consists of three layers. If hair is healthy, natural oils in the outer layer help protect the inner layers. They also reflects light, making hair appear shiny. Sheen and lustre are two important signs of healthy hair.

When hair is dry, the outer layer breaks down, causing it to appear dull and unhealthy.

Dandruff Care Shampoo

With Zinc Pyrithione , Vitamin E & Protein Complex

For dry & itchy scalp

Dandruff is the scalp's response to irritation.

Irritation to your scalp causes changes in the skin that create itchiness, dryness, and redness.

The irritation also speeds up the turnover of skin cells, and causes immature cells to clump together at the scalp's surface.

This clumping together creates the visible flakes of dandruff.

Why Hair Conditioner is important-

Each hair is covered in tiny cells which look a bit like fish scales.

Damage causes these to stand out which makes the hair look dull, rough and out of condition.

Conditioners work by smoothing down these scales so your hair looks smooth and shiny again.

shampooing opens the hair's cuticle, Conditioner seals it back up—locking nutrients in and pollutants out.

This in turn strengthens the hair shaft, preventing breakage, split ends, and even hair loss.

Conditioned hair is supple and holds on to its moisture for dazzling shimmer.

- When do most women go grey then?

"Most women who are in their 30s should see a few gray hairs, but by the time they get into their 50s most women would expect to have more than 50% of their scalp hairs turn grey."

- Why do we get grey hair in the first place?

"Grey hair is a combination of normally pigmented hairs interspersed with white ones. Hair turns white when the pigmentation cells responsible for colour (melanin) stop being produced."

- So, can slow the rate of greying hair?

"Nutritional and hormonal factors can affect hair colour as well as stress but, by and large, the predisposition to go grey earlier or later in life is genetic."

- Is grey hair more common in certain people?

Grey hair is an inherited trait - if your parents went grey early there is a possibility that you will too. Some health conditions may cause premature greying such as diabetes, pernicious anaemia or thyroid problems.
